

Subotica

WINE REGION

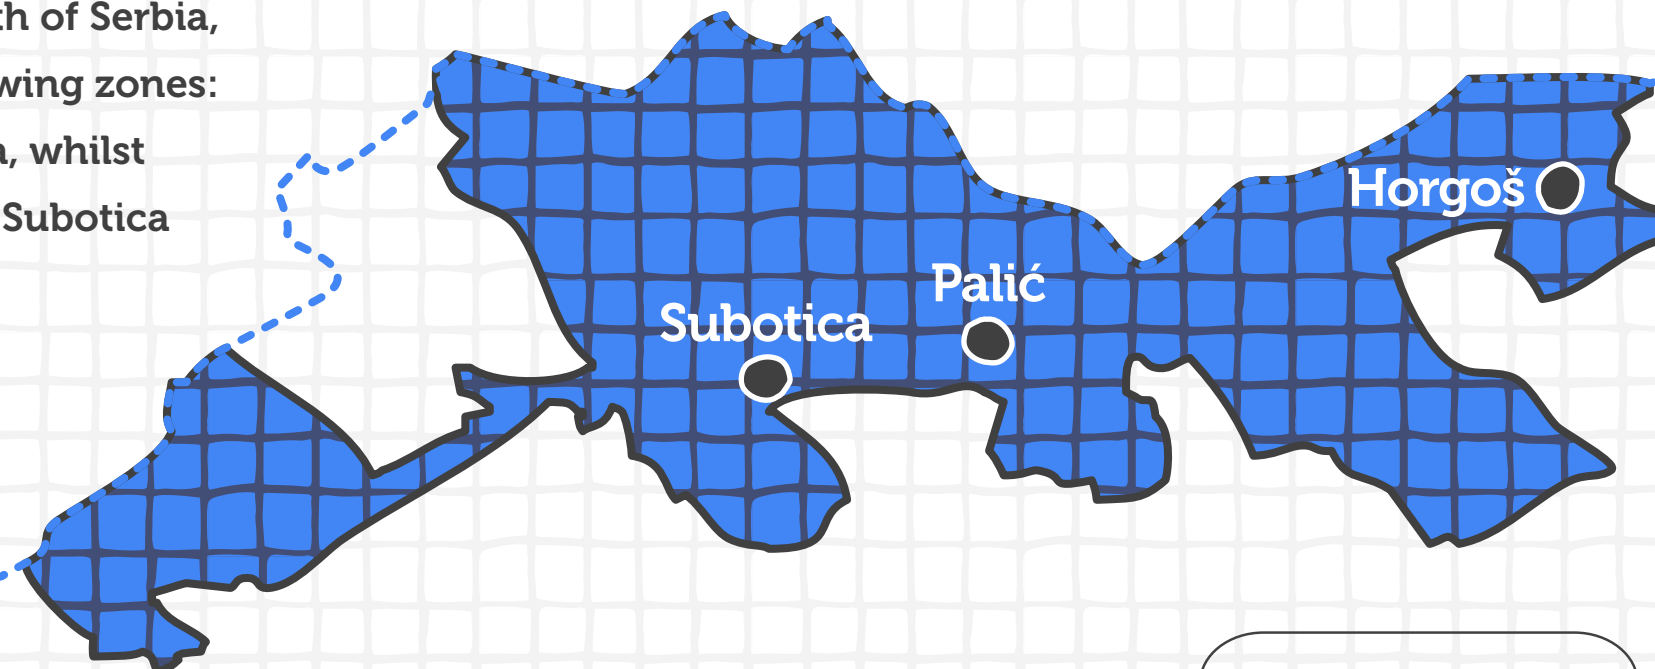

Vinopedia
www.vinopedia.rs

Subotica wine region stretches across sandy terrains in the very north of Serbia, alongside border with Hungary. This region is split into two vinegrowing zones: eastern and western. Western zone includes Ridica vinegrowing area, whilst Horgoš and Palić vinegrowing areas are located in the eastern zone. Subotica wine region is a treasure trove of local varieties.

Ridica

312
vineyard hectares

Subotica

Palić

Horgoš

0 5
km

Serbia

Main grape varieties

Kadarka, Ružica (Kevedinka), Ezerjó, Merlot, Pinot Blanc, Sauvignon Blanc, Chardonnay, Frankovka (Blafränkisch), Grašac (Italian Riesling)

You can often come across old vineyards such as the oldest vineyard of Kadarka originating from 1880. Nowadays, international varieties have also arrived in this region alongside local vines that have been growing here for centuries.

Vinegrowing in this region reached its peak in the 19th century and the period after phylloxera. History remembers that local aristocratic family Kovács owned 100 hectares of vineyards in Ridica and the largest wine cellar in Bács-Bodrog county. In the period before the World War II, there were 4,718 hectares of vineyards in the region. After the fall of socialism in Yugoslavia and collapse of state-owned Palić Wine Cellar, small family wineries take the lead in an attempt to restore former glory of Subotica wine region.

wine
sofa
www.winesofa.eu